THURSDAY FEATURE | HERITAGE + FRENCH ASSORTMENT

A world of discovery, ready for a French-language home.

Replogle has made globes for classrooms and homes since 1930. Its French-language Globemaster gives Quebec resellers a specific way to bring that long-running story to customers who want a globe they can read, use and display.

Luther and Elizabeth Replogle began in Chicago.	The Globemaster is 30 cm in diameter.	A practical language fit for Quebec customers.	Current Randmar inventory supports a focused feature.

A globe belongs beyond the classroom

Replogle began by hand assembling globes in a Chicago apartment. The founding idea was simple: a globe could help people learn and also be a beautiful object at home. The company still describes craftsmanship and cartographic care as central to its work.

That story has a direct product expression in the French-language Globemaster. Randmar lists the 12-inch (30 cm) antique-ocean desk globe with a metal semi-meridian under MPN 31655. It offers a visual way to explore geography and a distinctive desk or shelf piece without asking a customer to make room for a large floor globe.

Where this edition fits

- Schools, libraries and learning spaces that want French map labels.
- Families looking for a lasting learning gift that also suits a living space.
- Offices and design-led retailers seeking a compact conversation piece.

A focused Canadian opportunity

Randmar has the French Globemaster available from Laval. A reseller can build a thoughtful product page around its language, size, antique-ocean appearance and Replogle heritage. Current stock supports a timely feature, while the broader English and French assortment offers paths for customers with different spaces and tastes.

Ask before you recommend

- Does the customer need French or English map labels?
- Is a 12-inch desk format right for the space?
- Is the purpose learning, gifting or display?

Three signals make this timely
